Description

Company Description

Helping over ten million people around the world manage their savings, retirement plans and life insurance requires a lot of people behind the scenes. It's up to us in L&G Group functions – which includes our tech and digital teams, Group Finance, HR, Risk and Corporate Affairs – to provide the essential support services that all areas of the business need, here in the UK and overseas. Simply put, we enable everyone at Legal & General to do what they do best. That means we're helping to improve our customers' lives and contributing to the success of the business every day.

Job Description

Legal and General's Group Data and Analytics function is looking to hire a Lead Data Engineer to assume responsibility around the delivery of the infrastructure and data flow of the mainframe through to the internal customers in the Retirement Operations team.

This role will see you working closely with the team to improve the current mainframe and data flows, building new rest APIs and removing the click replicate functions which are currently in place while evaluating and making improvements to engineering strategy.

What you'll be doing:

- Ensuring projects are scoped accurately, while designs and technical deliveries meet standardised practices
- Ensuring development and business changes adhere to the agreed process, align with quality standards, and are delivered within cost constraints and regulatory guidelines
- Working within an agile methodology framework, promoting continuous improvement and efficiency
- Overseeing solution development from design to implementation, ensuring solutions are fit for purpose
- Identifying and mitigating issues and risks associated with data solutions and projects
- Engaging stakeholders effectively, providing guidance on data solutions and ensuring productive relationships
- Engaging stakeholders and undertaking appropriate testing prior to any system or business changes, ensuring the impact on internal stakeholders and customers is fully understood
- Motivating, and developing employees at all levels in a manner consistent with the Company's policies and procedures, including the Partnership Agreement, to maximise the area's performance
